- Strategy outperformed its primary benchmark, led by Health Care, Consumer Discretionary, and Industrials holdings; holdings in the Information Technology sector detracted
- Riverbridge continues to focus on identifying companies possessing the ability to grow their business while generating strong free cash flow and without being dependent on the financial markets to finance this growth

MARKET COMMENTARY

The third quarter of 2019 featured dramatic headlines and several “firsts.” In July, in response to softening economic data, the US Federal Reserve lowered interest rates for the first time since 2008. In August, interest rates paid on 10-year Treasury notes fell below those on 2-year Treasury notes (a phenomenon known as “Yield Curve Inversion”) for the first time since 2007. The US Purchasing Managers Index fell below 50, signaling contraction, for first time since 2009. In addition, continuing uncertainty over the terms of Great Britain’s departure from the European Union caused concern about growth overseas. The trading relationship between the US and China seemed to fluctuate daily. Finally, in the last few weeks of the quarter, the US House of Representatives commenced an impeachment investigation against the President.

The historically weak third quarter should have buckled against this backdrop. At a minimum, we should have witnessed breathtaking market volatility. In the end, however, the major market indices were relatively flat with below average volatility. Large Cap indices produced slight gains, outperforming the smaller companies in the Russell 2000 Growth® and Russell 2500 Growth™ indices, which experienced slight declines. Growth stocks outperformed value for most of the period but starting approximately the second week of September through the end of the quarter, value outperformed growth.

STRATEGY COMMENTARY

The Riverbridge Small Cap Growth strategy outperformed its primary benchmark, the Russell 2000® Growth, during the quarter, and increased its lead over the index year-to-date. Stock selection in Health Care was the biggest contributor to the strategy’s relative performance. Our investments in the Industrials and Consumer Discretionary sectors also performed well, more than offsetting underperformance in Information Technology.

In the third quarter, the Riverbridge investment team was able to navigate the changes in the macroeconomic and political environments by largely ignoring them. Our goal remains to outperform the market over the long term, rather than to attempt to anticipate or follow short-term trends. We continue to look to invest in companies that can adapt to an ever-changing world, and in many cases even create change.

One example of a portfolio company which has successfully adapted to a changing world is Gentex Corporation (GNTX). We first invested in GNTX in our Small Cap Growth strategy in September of 2000. GNTX is a participant in one of the oldest industries in the US economy - car manufacturing - and is the dominant supplier of rearview dimming mirrors to the automotive industry. Historically, GNTX has been able to grow through increased uptake of their technology across global markets and by adding additional features to mirror technology. This has generally allowed the company to grow faster and more steadily than the volatile automotive industry.

The first significant change that GNTX's management has weathered since our initial investment was the erosion of the market share of the "Big Three" US manufacturers (GM, Ford, and Chrysler). As a result of the quality and innovation of its products, GNTX has been able to maintain its relationship with the traditional manufacturers but also win business from the major foreign brands. The second major change has been technology. Through farsighted investment in research and development, GNTX has over the years introduced sophisticated technology to a previously simple component. The most recent example is Full Display Mirrors (FDM). FDM technology integrates two side cameras and allows drivers to view them simultaneously in the large footprint of the rearview mirror. Other innovations in various stages of development include an Integrated Toll Module, auto-dimming sunroofs, and dimmable windows for aircraft. We expect that continuing to add features to mirror technology will enable GNTX to generate sustainable revenue growth while maintaining a strong margin profile and cash flow generation.

OUTLOOK

Many divergent opinions exist regarding equities as we approach the end of 2019. The good news for investors is that earnings expectations remain subdued. Low expectations reduce the overall risk for equities should companies issue conservative earnings guidance. Many potentially market disrupting events will shape the fourth quarter. These include the October Brexit deadline, two tariff implementation dates, Fed meetings and ongoing impeachment hearings.

Riverbridge continues to focus on identifying companies possessing the ability to grow their business while generating strong free cash flow and without being dependent on the financial markets to finance this growth. Our portfolio companies are managed by leaders focused on the next decade and not simply the next year. They are making the proper capital allocation decisions while considering the global economic backdrop. Regardless of market sentiment, our portfolio companies remain well-positioned for growth.

The firm provides investment management services to institutional and individual investors. The company offers growth-oriented investment services by investing in growth equity securities, which it believes will provide high returns over the long term. The firm's standard fee schedule is an annual 1%.

Composite Characteristics: The Small Cap Growth Composite was created in July 1988. It is a growth stock portfolio invested in small to medium sized growth companies. This strategy generally invests in companies with market capitalizations of less than $5 billion. A complete list and description of all firm composites is available upon request. The composite benchmark is the Russell 2000® Growth Index. The Russell 2000® Growth Index includes the segment of securities within the Russell 2000® Index with higher price-to-book ratios and higher forecasted growth values. The Russell 2000® Index is an unmanaged index measuring the performance of the small-cap U.S. equity universe. Prior to 2008, the Russell 2000® Index was also shown for general market comparison purposes. The composite minimum value is $100,000.

Calculation Methodology: Valuations and returns are computed and stated in U.S. dollars. Individual portfolios are revalued daily starting 1/1/2009. Prior to that, individual portfolios were revalued monthly and intra-month when large cash flows (defined at 10%) occurred. Gross-of-fee returns are calculated net of transaction costs and gross of management fees. Until 12/31/2007, net performance was calculated by applying the maximum annual management fee of 1% to gross performance on a monthly basis. Starting 1/1/2008, net-of-fee returns are calculated net of actual investment management fees. Both gross-of-fee and net-of-fee returns are calculated gross of all withholding taxes on foreign dividends. Accruals are included in calculations. The dispersion measure is the equal-weighted standard deviation of accounts in the composite for the entire year. Additional information for valuing portfolios, calculating performance and preparing compliant presentations is available upon request.
