HIGHLIGHTS

- Outperformed the broader markets during a turbulent 4Q due to portfolio companies reporting broad fundamental progress
- Consumer Discretionary, Health Care, Industrials, and Information Technology holdings performed significantly better than benchmark
- Our self-financed, less economically sensitive businesses are poised for continued fundamental success regardless of short-term market movements because they are less impacted by rising interest rates and input costs

MARKET COMMENTARY

The fourth quarter of 2018 provided a fitting end to a turbulent year. This past year forced investors to contend with renewed volatility after a historically placid 2017. In the final three months of the year, small cap stocks entered bear market territory under the combined influences of inflationary pressures, a hawkish Federal Reserve, trade wars, and decelerating economic growth. In the Russell 2000® Growth index, only one sector - Utilities - generated a positive return. The remaining ten sectors all declined by double digits. The Health Care, Industrials, Consumer Discretionary, and Information Technology sectors were the biggest performance detractors from the index.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Riverbridge Small Cap Growth portfolio was not immune to the difficult market in the fourth quarter but nevertheless outperformed its primary benchmark, the Russell 2000® Growth index, by nearly five percent. This capped off a strong year of relative performance for the strategy; in 2018, the Small Cap Growth portfolio increased more than eight percent against the benchmark's decline of more than nine percent. In the fourth quarter, the portfolio's Consumer Discretionary, Health Care, Industrials, and Information Technology holdings significantly outperformed the benchmark. Consumer Staples and Financials were detractors for the portfolio versus the index, as was the strategy's lack of Real Estate holdings, which was one of the benchmark's better performing sectors. Despite the volatile market, throughout 2018 Riverbridge's portfolio companies broadly exhibited strong fundamental progress, strengthened their strategic market positions, and generated compelling returns on their invested capital.

Loyal readers are by now well versed in Riverbridge's unwavering focus on the fundamentals of our portfolio companies. The Investment Team spends its time and energy evaluating a company's strategic position within its marketplace, its reputation among peers, and its management team's long-term vision. At all times, our primary concern is whether the business is positioned to build enduring earnings power through sustainable unit growth and high returns on invested capital. When we invest in a company, we are thinking about where it will be in a decade, as opposed to the preponderance of managers who focus on the next quarter or next year.

Many financial publications noted that the stock market's performance in December 2018 was the worst December since the Great Depression. Though true, the fact is irrelevant, beyond the alarm it may cause a reader. Unlike 1931, the economy is on firm footing, corporate earnings are growing, and unemployment is near all-time lows. Fundamentals and stock prices decoupled in the fourth quarter; the long-term investor is well served to ignore the latter. In fact, in the wake of a rapid sell-off, the importance of a long-term view and deep fundamental research is magnified.

Our investment in Dorman Products, Inc. (DORM) embodies our fundamental approach. Dorman is a manufacturer of non-OEM replacement mechanical parts such as windows, mirrors, key fobs, and underbody parts. Their primary competitor is OEMs, but in 2017, another potential aftermarket competitor entered the picture - Amazon, Inc. As with many industries, when headlines emerged that Amazon was entering the marketplace, DORM's stock price reacted negatively.

Through Riverbridge's continued due diligence and meetings with DORM's ecosystem, the Investment Team viewed this development differently. First, Amazon has been and continues to be a significant DORM customer, acting as a distributor of their parts. Second, the team's extensive conversations with auto parts retailers, mechanics, and other industry participants have uncovered DORM's strategic market position is extremely difficult to displace. DORM's relationships with mechanics and its capabilities with respect to manufacturing parts quickly at a meaningfully lower price point that are easier for mechanics to replace have been developed over decades. Finally, DORM's opportunity set continues to expand; modern cars last longer, thus increasing the number of repairs, and have increasingly sophisticated electronic components that the company is well positioned to manufacture.

After a tumultuous 2017, DORM's stock price rebounded in 2018. Neither price movement was relevant to our investment in the company. Regardless of short-term stock price movements, DORM remains a compelling long-term business in which the Investment Team remains highly convicted. Turbulent times such as the present remind us to focus on what endures rather than what is transitory.

OUTLOOK

Market participants will closely monitor corporate earnings in 2019. Investors expect a deceleration in earnings growth following the tax-cut driven 20 percent-plus earnings growth in 2018. However, the magnitude of this deceleration will be telling. According to IBES data, earnings for the S&P 500® are expected to grow eight percent in 2019. Should this figure prove optimistic, the markets will continue to feel pressure. In addition to earnings growth, inflationary pressures will be carefully monitored. With unemployment remaining at a 49-year low, conditions are ripe for wage driven inflation. Modest levels of wage-induced inflation are healthy. Too much of an increase, however, could spur the Fed to enact more interest rate hikes.

Overall, Riverbridge's portfolio companies are poised for continued success. They are less impacted by rising interest rates and borrowing costs because of their ability to internally finance their growth. More importantly, our portfolio companies, in aggregate, continue to exhibit healthy fundamentals and strengthening strategic market positions. Our portfolio companies tend to generate high levels of free cash flow and are generally less economically sensitive relative to the broader markets. This backdrop provides them a good chance to meet success against an uncertain macro backdrop.

Firm Information: Riverbridge Partners, LLC is a Minnesota based investment advisor registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Investment Advisors Act of 1940. The firm provides investment management services to institutional and individual investors. The company offers growth-oriented investment services by investing in growth equity securities, which it believes will provide high returns over the long term. The firm's standard fee schedule is an annual 1%.

Composite Characteristics: The Small Cap Growth Composite was created in July 1988. It is a growth stock portfolio invested in small to medium sized growth companies. This strategy generally invests in companies with market capitalizations of less than $5 billion. A complete list and description of all firm composites is available upon request. The composite benchmark is the Russell 2000® Growth Index. The Russell 2000® Growth Index includes the segment of securities within the Russell 2000® Index with higher price-to-book ratios and higher forecasted growth values. The Russell 2000® Index is an unmanaged index measuring the performance of the small-cap U.S. equity universe. Prior to 2008, the Russell 2000® Index was also shown for general market comparison purposes. The composite minimum value is $100,000.

Calculation Methodology: Valuations and returns are computed and stated in U.S. dollars. Individual portfolios are revalued daily starting 1/1/2009. Prior to that, individual portfolios were revalued monthly and intra-month when large cash flows (defined at 10%) occurred. Gross-of-fee returns are calculated net of transaction costs and gross of management fees. Until 12/31/2007, net performance was calculated by applying the maximum annual management fee of 1% to gross performance on a monthly basis. Starting 1/1/2008, net-of-fee returns are calculated net of actual investment management fees. Both gross-of-fee and net-of-fee returns are calculated gross of all withholding taxes on foreign dividends. Accruals are included in calculations. The dispersion measure is the equal-weighted standard deviation of accounts in the composite for the entire year. Additional information for valuing portfolios, calculating performance and preparing compliant presentations is available upon request.

A description of Riverbridge Partners' advisory fees are disclosed on Part 2 of its Form ADV, a copy of which is available upon request.
